SING YOUR LOVE HOLY HOUR

March 7, 6:00-7:00 p.m. at Sacred Heart – This is a monthly event, on the First Thursday of every month at Sacred Heart of Jesus during Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, a Holy Hour will be led by Disciples of Our Eucharistic Lord. All are welcome! Confessions 6:00-7:00 p.m.

FROM THE

*Pastor's DeskNot Yet

As was announced at Masses last weekend, I have requested to be given a new assignment come July. Where I will be going and who will be the new pastor will be assigned in the coming months provided there is adequate interest and availability for the position. The same applies to Fr. Aaron and his position in our Family of Parishes. Because when a vicar reaches three years of priesthood, he is asked to take a new assignment in order to get a series of varied experiences before becoming a pastor. However, we have substantial time before these developments come to fruition. So, know that we are both still fully invested and will be so until we hand the reigns to others.

Whether you are sad or relieved that I am leaving, I want you all to know that I want to see you all in heaven. Whether we agree or not, I still see each of you as a brother or sister in the Lord and we are co-heirs to eternal life. May we all seek to do His will before all else. In this line, I want to encourage you all to build up your priests. They receive a lot of criticism and often the worst is assumed of them. A word of encouragement and authentic affirmation mean a lot to priests. Such care and concern will help your next pastor to gain confidence and strengthen him to lead where the Lord desires for St. Joseph, Pillar of Families to go.

One thing I want to do in my final months is to simplify the responsibilities and duties of the staff and priests alike. There is a lot going on in our Family of Parishes and this makes it difficult to slow down and take stock of what the next step is. So, bringing some simplification to the table will help to make the next pastor's job more manageable and enable him to better lead.

That said, Fr. Aaron and I will be present and minister for a while yet. Thus, now is not the time for goodbyes and we still have a ways to journey before our paths part. "It is good that we are here!" (Matthew 17:4) So please know that we are still here to serve you.

A reminder to keep going this Lent, you may have "fallen off the wagon" of your original commitments, but you can always get back up and keep trying. Failure is just an opportunity to learn and keep moving forward. The Lord always forgives if we ask and will set us on our feet to try again.

Thank you to so many wonderful parishioners of St. Joseph, Pillar of Families. I have seen such a hunger for Jesus Christ and the truth of the Catholic Church in so many of you along with your support, for which I am deeply grateful. I thank my vicars and staff. They have worked tirelessly to make St. Joseph, Pillar of Families a reality. I thank the archbishop for his care and concern. His spiritual fatherhood fills me with hope for the Church in the 19 counties of our archdiocese. The Holy Spirit is truly working in our midst.

Peace in Christ,

Fr. Jarred Kohn

THE VICAR'S CORNER: FR. ANDREW RECKERS CAN PRAYER CHANGE GOD'S MIND?

Someone recently asked me a profound question that puzzles many people: Why does the Bible seem to imply that God sometimes changes His mind in response to prayer? Needless to say, this question sparked a great spiritual conversation and inspired me to write on this topic for a Vicar's Corner. On one level, this is a question about the language used in the Bible to describe God. Yet, there is another underlying question that is even deeper: Can God change His mind at all? Obviously, these are topics that are so profound that this short article will only be able to serve as an introduction in answering these questions.

With respect to the question about whether God can change His mind, the simple answer is no. This is because if God can change His mind, then God would be subject to time and change, and His mind and will would be imperfect. Obviously, these problematic conclusions are incompatible with what we know about God – that He is omniscient (all-knowing), omnipotent (all-powerful), omnibenevolent (all-good), and eternal (meaning that He exists outside of time and change and is not limited or moved by them in any way). However, if God cannot change His mind, then we seem to have problems: First, the language in the Bible seems contrary to this conclusion, and second, it would seem to imply that prayer has no purpose or effect. Moreover, if God's will for the created world is unchanging, then it would seem to take away human free will.

How are we to address this apparent dilemma? The key is to understand an important feature of God's will in the created world: Conditionality. Simply put, a conditional is an "if-then" relationship that describes the consequences if certain conditions are met. However, if the "input" conditions (called the antecedents) are different, then the "output" results (called the consequents) may or may not be different, without any change in the conditional that was made. By using conditionals, God's unchanging will is compatible with the free will of the people He created.

A simple example of conditionality in a human family might help to illustrate how this works. Suppose a child's parents discover that the child is responsible for breaking a window due to reckless behavior. The parents can create a conditional with respect to how to deal with the child. If the child confesses to breaking the window and expresses sorrow, then this would result in the parents being lenient on the child. However, if the child lies or otherwise tries to get away with taking responsibility, then this would result in the parents giving a severe punishment to the child. In this case, the parents have made up their minds about what is to be done, and their minds do not change. However, there are different resulting consequences, depending on whether the child apologizes or tries to get away with it. In a similar way, by God making His will for us and the world conditional, many different outcomes can result in our free will choices without God changing His perfect mind or will. Among the many things that go into these conditionals as antecedent "inputs" is prayer. If we choose to pray, then this can affect the outcomes in our world in dramatic ways, depending on how God has chosen to set up the conditionals and their possible consequences. So, in short, God "factors in" whether and to what extent we pray to determine a range of outcomes for us and our world. This means that prayer can powerfully change the world, as an instrument of God's working in the world, without moving or changing God. Of course, the conditionals and their possible consequences are ultimately mysterious and unknown to us. Thus, it is impossible to try to predict the results of prayer, much less try to force God to give us what we want in the way we want. More deserves to be said about this that I cannot address in this short space.

With all this said, the initial question remains: Why does the Bible sometimes seem to imply that God changes His mind in response to prayer? The short answer is that the Bible often uses figurative rather than literal language, especially when trying to describe the infinite and ultimately indescribable God. One category of this figurative language is to describe God in human terms, which includes describing God as using hands and arms or walking with others. The purpose of this language is not to literally illustrate what God looks like or how He works in the world. Instead, this language is to help us to have a better relationship with Him by using figurative language that is more understandable and relatable to us than what is literal about God. It is much easier to relate on a human level to God "changing His mind" than explaining how conditionality works, as I have tried to do above.

In conclusion, even though prayer does not change God, it can and does powerfully change us and the world. Moreover, it is God's will that we pray so that we learn to trust in Him and conform our wills and hearts to His perfect will. The point of prayer is not to change God, who cannot and does not need to be changed. Instead, the point of prayer is to change what needs to be changed: Our hearts and our world.
